

Reimagining Your Work Space

Everyone deserves an inspiring space to work!

March 2018

The workplace has changed but how many of us can wholeheartedly say we are inspired by the environment we work in? We read about firms like Google and Amazon who have reimagined the work space for their employees (lucky for them!). What if you're not part of that group, are you finding yourself stuck behind a cubicle from the 1990s wondering whether there's more inspiring work for you outside of those fabric walls?

The guys in silicon valley figured out early on that the work and the work environment do go hand in hand. Happily many firms are slowly catching on and even the little guys are not being left far behind. If you're a 1-4 person operation, you may be surprised to find a modern shared work space for your team right in your backyard.

Look at York Executive Group, a boutique style shared space community (in York Region) with all the bells and whistles of a modern work environment.

They have height adjustable desks, Herman Miller desk chairs, inviting collaboration areas, complimentary beverages, an onsite restaurant that serves up Korean daily specials!

The Director of York Executive Group, Mrs. Lam designed the space as a gift to the small businesses of York Region. Her 25+ years in real estate made her realise that modern spaces are very hard to come by and many small businesses could never afford modern space on their own. Mrs. Lam comments, "I wanted to build a modern space that small businesses would be proud of and begin building a shared space community that would be a best in class example in York Region!" She explains further, "no one is too small to work in her new space, we rent out desks and meeting room spaces to suit everyone's needs."

This wave of boutique style shared office spaces will definitely catch on because small businesses may be small but they still appreciate a personalised professional space. When you catch a glimpse of what inspiring work space looks like, it'll have you reimagining the space you and your colleagues deserve!
